

A Guide to the State Street Real Assets ETF Model Portfolio

Designed to Protect Client Portfolios
Against Inflation

Combating Inflation with Real Asset Model Portfolios

Investors who find themselves vulnerable to a sustained move higher in inflation should consider the inclusion of inflation-hedging assets, such as real assets, which have historically performed well and shown a higher beta and correlation to inflation than traditional assets.

Reasons to Consider the State Street Real Assets ETF Model Portfolio

Inflationary pressures fuel chatter about what assets intermediaries should be allocating toward to protect clients from the ravages of rising consumer prices. Real assets are an increasingly prominent part of the inflation-fighting conversation.

Investors looking for depth and diversification when it comes to beating inflation can consider the State Street Real Assets Model Portfolio, which is designed to provide:

- Protection from inflation shocks
- Relatively attractive returns
- Broad diversification benefits
- Alpha and income opportunities

You can offer your clients consistent, institutional quality investment insights that not only capture the wider market but also have specific objectives such as managing inflationary challenges — enabling you to spend less time managing money and more time building the valuable relationships that grow your business.

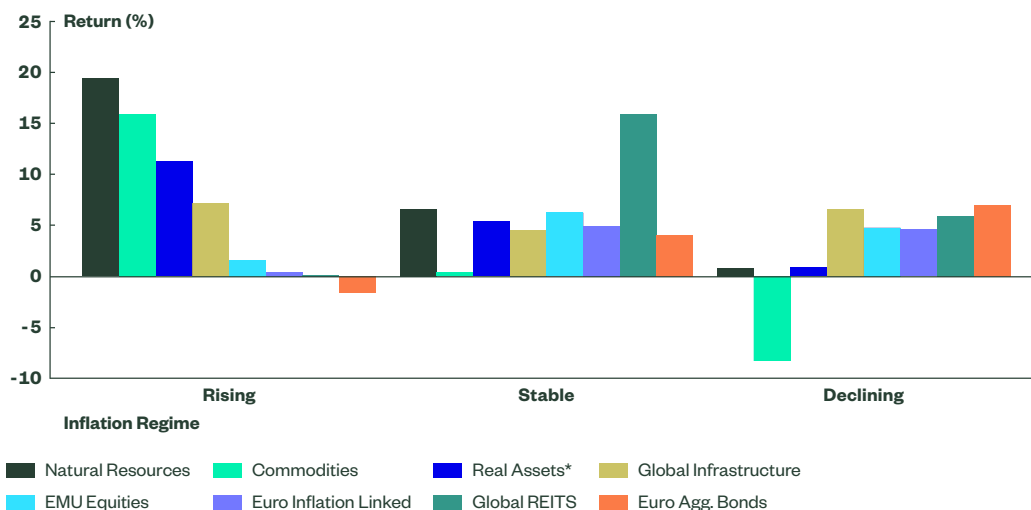

State Street ETF Model Portfolios are designed for a range of investment outcomes and provide diversification opportunities across a variety of asset classes.

Why Include Real Assets in your Client Portfolios

Over the last decade, inflation has been subdued around the globe and struggled to come close to central bank targets despite loose monetary policy actions. However, influenced by the economic effects of the global pandemic, inflation has re-emerged in 2021 and could have an impact in the years to come. The core view of the Fed is that inflation is likely to be transient, driven by pent-up re-opening demand and supply chain bottlenecks. However, despite upwards revisions to inflation forecasts from central banks and market participants, inflation in key developed markets such as the US and UK has still surprised to the upside and could persist for longer than expected.

Given this backdrop, it is prudent to include inflation-hedging assets, such as real assets including commodities and infrastructure, within the investment toolkit.

Portfolio allocations are as of the date indicated, are subject to change, and should not be relied upon as current thereafter. Model Portfolio Allocations presented above are hypothetical and have been provided for illustrative purposes only. They do not reflect the results of the actual trading of any account or group of accounts and actual results could differ substantially. A model portfolio is an allocation to a list of funds that are group together. Where a model portfolio is offered on an investment platform, investors who select it effectively instruct the platform operator to acquire units in the ETFs that comprise the model portfolio. The model portfolio described above has not yet been implemented by State Street, so the results are hypothetical. The actual results of accounts managed by the Platform or Managed Accounts provider ("Provider") that receives access to the models may differ substantially from the hypothetical results for a variety of reasons including, but not limited to, the Provider's decision to exercise its discretion to implement a model in a way that differs from the information provided by State Street. State Street cannot guarantee any payment of dividends, which is subject to the dividend payment policy of the individual issuers of the underlying ETFs and the Provider.

Inflation Beta and Correlation to Inflation

Real assets have historically performed well in such an environment, with higher beta and correlation to inflation than traditional assets.

Higher inflation will not surprise the markets, but the accompanying volatility will test investors' asset allocation strategies. All investors may soon find themselves vulnerable to a sustained move higher in inflation, and should consider the inclusion of inflation-hedging assets, such as real assets, in their portfolios because of strong historical performance during inflationary periods.

Our Investment Strategy for the State Street Real Assets ETF Model Portfolio

The Real Asset strategy is expected to perform best during periods of increasing inflation or rising unexpected inflation (see Figure 1). The strategy is meant to complement traditional equity and bond assets, providing further diversification, relatively attractive returns, and a source of income.

State Street aims to offer investors a seasoned, diversified multi-asset strategy that combines exposure to a broad array of liquid real asset securities (see Figure 2). These allocations are carefully refined and finalised by our experienced portfolio management team.

Why Use State Street ETF Model Portfolios

This model portfolio is designed for growth-oriented investors with a long-term horizon looking to maximize capital appreciation through a globally diversified set of real asset ETFs.

Following a strategic model portfolio's buy, hold and rebalance strategy rather than attempting to time the market — either with individual securities or asset classes — may result in a more efficient investment outcome given the liquidity profile of the underlying assets classes. A strategic rebalancing approach for the real assets model portfolio reflects the diversification and discipline that is central to successful multi-asset investing. This standardisation increases your efficiency by reducing time spent on investment research, portfolio management and performance reporting, allowing you to spend more time cultivating client relationships and growing your practice.

In addition to benefitting from more of your attention, your clients gain:

- Access to institutional-quality investment solutions. We have experience in managing multi-asset class solutions since 1987
- Discipline to curtail potentially harmful emotional reactions to market volatility
- Access to real asset products across a broad array of global strategic benchmarks
- Cost-effective portfolios matched to their goals, risk tolerance and time horizon¹

Cost-Efficient ETFs

As investing's great democratizer, ETFs offer a transparent and cost-efficient way to invest. And real assets ETFs now make investment strategies that were once available only to the largest investors available to everyone.

The model portfolio features our suite of SPDR ETFs as well as ETFs from third-party issuers. The offerings are global in nature, diversified at the asset class levels.

The potential benefits of using ETFs in model portfolios include:

Transparency <hr/> Easy and straightforward way to build exposure to each market by tracking an index. The result is high level transparency and low expenses and management fees.	Diversification <hr/> ETFs hold a diverse group of securities, delivering the potential benefit of broad exposure to a single asset class or category.
UCITS Compliant <hr/> All SPDR ETFs proposed in the portfolios are UCITS compliant.	Precision <hr/> ETFs are available in many asset classes, market capitalisations and investment styles.

A Partnership that Works

The Potential Benefits of Working With State Street Global Advisors

With a heritage dating back to 1978, State Street Global Advisors is entrusted with $3.62 trillion in assets under management (AUM).² As the pioneer and one of the leaders of the exchange traded fund (ETF) industry since creating the first US ETF in 1993, State Street Global Advisors has grown to $1.09 trillion in global ETF AUM.³

With an established team of over 150 dedicated investment strategists and portfolio managers, the State Street Global Advisors Investment Solutions Group (ISG)⁴ designs, develops and manages portfolios of SPDR ETFs on both a strategic and tactical basis in line with a client's objectives.

Bonds generally present less short-term risk and volatility than stocks, but contain interest rate risk (as interest rates rise, bond prices usually fall); issuer default risk; issuer credit risk; liquidity risk; and inflation risk. These effects are usually pronounced for longer-term securities. Any fixed income security sold or redeemed prior to maturity may be subject to a substantial gain or loss.

ETFs trade like stocks, are subject to investment risk, fluctuate in market value and may trade at prices above or below the ETFs net asset value. Brokerage commissions and ETF expenses will reduce returns.

ETFs trade like stocks, are subject to investment risk and will fluctuate in market value. The investment return and principal value of an investment will fluctuate in value, so that when shares are sold or redeemed, they may be worth more or less than when they were purchased. Although shares may be bought or sold on an exchange through any brokerage account, shares are not individually redeemable from the fund. Investors may acquire shares and tender them for redemption through the fund in large aggregations known as "creation units." Please see the fund's prospectus for more details. Investing in high yield fixed income securities, otherwise known as "junk bonds", is considered speculative and involves greater risk of loss of principal and interest than investing in investment grade fixed income securities. These Lower-quality debt securities involve greater risk of default or price changes due to potential changes in the credit quality of the issuer. International Government bonds and corporate bonds generally have more moderate short-term price fluctuations than stocks, but provide lower potential long-term returns.

Investing in REITs involves certain distinct risks in addition to those risks associated with investing in the real estate industry in general. Equity REITs may be affected by changes in the value of the underlying property owned by the REITs, while mortgage REITs may be affected by the quality of credit extended. REITs are subject to heavy cash flow dependency, default by borrowers and self-liquidation. REITs, especially mortgage REITs, are also subject to interest rate risk (i.e., as interest rates rise, the value of the REIT may decline).

Equity securities may fluctuate in value and can decline significantly in response to the activities of individual companies and general market and economic conditions.

There are risks associated with investing in Real Assets and the Real Assets sector, including real estate, precious metals and natural resources. Investments can be significantly affected by events relating to these industries.

Asset Allocation is a method of diversification which positions assets among major investment categories. Asset Allocation may be used in an effort to manage risk and enhance returns. It does not, however, guarantee a profit or protect against loss.

Investing in foreign domiciled securities may involve risk of capital loss from unfavorable fluctuation in currency values, withholding taxes, from differences in generally accepted accounting principles or from economic or political instability in other nations. Investments in emerging or developing markets may be more volatile and less liquid than investing in developed markets and may involve exposure to economic structures that are generally less diverse and mature and to political systems which have less stability than those of more developed countries. Investments in small-sized companies may involve greater risks than in those of larger, better known companies. Diversification does not ensure a profit or guarantee against loss.
